THE GOSPEL OF A CLEAN LIFE.

FOR GOD, HOME AND NATIVE LAND.

An Earnest Lecture by Miss Kearney in Behalf of the Principles of the W. C. T. U.—Liquor Traffic the Most Stupendous Business in the United States—Our National Government in Partnership With the Hellish Business—Upheld by the President.

A fairly large congregation heard Miss Belle Kearney, the W. C. T. U. National lecturer, at Centenary Methodist church last night, all being charmed by her earnestness and forceful manner. She is truly a gifted woman, with a great story to tell, and possesses the power of impressing its importance upon her hearers. Thoroughly conversant with the subject in hand, one can but recognize the force of her arguments against the liquor traffic and for the protection of the home and society.

The service last night was opened by singing "For God and Home and Native Land," after which Rev. T. E. Wagg read a scripture lesson and Rev. J. H. Peele offered prayer. The speaker was then introduced by Mrs. Mary E. Cartland, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of North Carolina, who stated that, before becoming a National lecturer, Miss Kearney was for many years a W. C. T. U. organizer in this and foreign lands, and that she was now only awaiting an opportunity to go as a foreign missionary in the cause of temperance.

Miss Kearney said she came not as a minister, but to preach the gospel of a clean life for Jesus' sake, quoting as a text for her remarks: "Sir, we would see Jesus." Although two thousand years had passed, said the speaker, since this request was made of one of the twelve apostles, the hunger of humanity for Jesus was greater than ever. Today the cry rolls up from every walk of life: "Sir, we would see Jesus." The presence and knowledge of Jesus is the salvation of every evil.

Although the name of God does not appear in the constitution of the United States, our Supreme Court has declared that this is a Christian nation. Still we can never boast of our Christian civilization until men take Christ with them to the ballot box and legislative halls.

Miss Kearney stated that the traffic in liquor was the most stupendous business in the United States, more money being spent for intoxicants than for anything else. Tobacco comes second and sensuality third. "At this rate," said she "America will soon rival any heathen country in debauchery." She called attention to the fact that it is the young men principally who compose the drunken class, vast numbers of them filling drunkards' graves, while hundreds daily go to their death through the haunts of shame which exist as a result of the liquor traffic.

"This hellish business is protected by the constitution of our country," continued the speaker; "our National government is in partnership with it; society fawns upon it, and the Church stands aghast at it." In this connection she referred to the action of President McKinly, a professed Christian and a church member, in refusing to abolish the army canteen when he has the power to do so. She also spoke of his habit of having wine on his table and accepting the hospitality of brewers, and said that he rented his wife's property in Canton, Ohio, for saloon purposes. She did not appear to think, however, that Mr. Bryan would be much of an improvement, since he is credited with being in favor of high license.

Attention was called to the fact that wherever the American flag goes, the American saloon and debauchery follow. The first prohibitory law the world ever knew was enacted in the Hawaiian Islands, but when the American flag was planted there the law was repealed to make way for the saloon keeper and the libertine. In Cuba there were no saloons and practically no drunkenness until the American army entered the island.

"And what I say in regard to the saloon I say in regard to the dispensary. The latter is a compromise, a partnership with the liquor business. They tell me that the dispensary in South Carolina is an abomination. I would have no compromise. Let the men of this country, the twelve million voters, destroy it, root and branch, by forbidding its manufacture, exportation, importation, sale or gift, except under seal and for medical purposes only.

"North Carolina has been brave enough to handle the negro question. Now let it handle this whiskey question. If the voters of this State are brave enough to preserve and protect Anglo-Saxon supremacy they are brave enough to save the State from the evils of the liquor traffic."

Miss Kearney admitted that in many places local opinion had been wholly unsatisfactory for the reason that the enforcement of the law had been placed in the hands of officers who winked at violation of the law in all forms. She pleaded for such a moral sentiment in favor of prohibition as to make any law passed prohibitory. This could not be, she said, while Christian editors printed liquor advertisements, Christian doctors prescribed whiskey, Christian men rented their property to liquor dealers and Christian ministers passed fermented wine over the altar rail.

She spoke, in conclusion, of the work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union during the 117 years of its existence, saying great reformations were never brought about without great expense of time and labor.

At the conclusion of the service quite a number signed the pledge and 31 persons joined the W. C. T. U.

A THRILLING EXPERIENCE.

A Young Lady and Her Escort, Returing From Church, Have Trouble With a Horse.

Two of the people, a lady and a gentlemen, who went to Gray's Chapel yesterday had a very exciting experience on their way home. A passing train frightened their horse, and the animal at once became bent on mischief. He ran across a railroad cut and then took to the fields, and did not stop until both the occupants of the buggy were given a vigorous shake-up and unceremoniously spilled.

When the horse was caught, it was found that very little damage had been done, but the gallant young man was unwilling that his girl should get in again until there were fewer chances of her getting out as she did before. So he made a trial trip up the road, and found that everything was lovely; but when he started back after the young lady, the horse again became unruly and this time tore the buggy wellnigh to pieces.

The young man, in despair, hired another outfit, and the rest of trip was quiet, very quiet. Neither of the riders had been hurt, but they were shaky.

Young People Drive Twenty Three-Miles to Preaching.

Several couples of young people from Greensboro drove to Gray's Chapel, twenty-three miles south of the city, yesterday to attend a camp meeting which is in progress there. The attendance was very large. When the Greensboro contingent reached the place, the pavilion was packed, and a large number of people, unable to gain admittance, were biding their time in the surrounding grove.

The campmeetings at Gray's Chapel always begin on the fourth Sunday in September, a number of Greensboro people usually helping to swell the crowd

Thieves Visit the Keeley Institute's Pantry

Thieves entered the Keeley Institute pantry Saturday night and stole the supply of Sunday groceries, including a mutton, a quantity of butter and other provision. The theft was not discovered until yesterday morning, resulting in a late breakfast at the Institute, as it was necessary to send up town for supplies.

All the hungry thieves in this section of the country must have congregated in Greensboro, as it is almost an every night occurrence for some one's pantry to be robbed.

Suit Against Mr. Cox Abandoned.

It was learned Saturday afternoon, after The Telegram had gone to press, that the suit for the removal of Mr. J. S. Cox as receiver of the Bank of Guilford had been abandoned, and all charges withdrawn. The matter was to have come up before Judge, Hoke at Pittsboro, tomorrow.

TROOPS WATCHING STRIKERS

ON THEIR TRAIL AT DAYBREAK

Miners Set Out at Three O'clock to Intercept Those Willing to Work, and Troops Followed to Protect Them—Work Was Resumed in Some of the Collieries but With Only Half Force.

By Wire to The Telegram

Shenandoah, Sept. 24.—Work was resumed in the Pennsylvania and Reading collieries this morning under military protection. At daybreak a detachment of troops were rushed from here to Mahanoy City, Turkey Run and McAdoo. The soldiers were set to practice marching. The idea to Gen. Gobin was successful. He did not furnish troops to guard the mines but his tactics put practically the whole district under military protection. Forty collieries of the Pennsylvania and Reading Co. opened but enough men reported only to man a little over half of them. Bands of strikers marched out of town at three o'clock this morning to take stations to intercept men going to work on all the roads leading to the mines. At five o'clock detachments of troops marched out the same roads to protect the willing miners.

SHENANDOAH VALLEY TIED UP.

The whistles in the colleries this moring blew as usual at seven o'clock, but not a single one could start as very few miners responded. Everything in the Shenandoah Valley is tied up tight. The miners are actuated by two causes. First, fear of the threat of Slavs to resume the riot this morning; second, dislike of the miners to be escorted by military.

BRICK YARDS STOP.

Nyac, Sept. 24.—Because of the strike in the anthracite region consequent upon the scarcity of coal, many Haverstraw brick yards shut down today, throwing hundreds out of work. The brick business along the Hudson will be affected if the strike continues.

BOYCOTTING COAL.

New York, Sept. 24—The Journal says the swithmen of the Pennsylvania coal minning districts have resolved not to handle non union coal and another big strike is threatened on the coal carrying roads. Three officers of the switchmen's union are here today trying to make terms with presidents of railroads. "The time when switchmen will act is uncertain." It said however that they will demand of the railroads a settlement by Wednesday night.

LACKAWANNA LOSES HOPE.

Scranton, Penn., Sept. 24.—The D. L. & W. which intended to undertake starting its big breaker and colliery this morning gave it up. Its agents canvassed the workmen, but couldn't find any willing while the strike is on. All hope of Lackawanna of getting its men back to the mines by promises to consider the stated grievances specially made by them and their demand for increased wages has vanished. The only concerns which managed to start are the Oxford and Diamond washeries of the Lackawanna Company and the Columbus washery.

STILL WANTING TROOPS.

Shenandoah, Sept. 24.—Strikers have attacked Preston colliery at Girardville near here. Gen. Gobin has been asked for troops.

Forty Houses Burned.

By Wire to The Telegram.

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 24.—Fire this morning burned the large boarding stables of Nathan Katz, and forty horses perished in the flames. Employe John Wall was fatally burned.

A Charlotte Man Loses His Valise in a Mysterious Manner.

Mr. John W. Arrington, of Charlotte, lost a valise containing a number of valued articles here yesterday. He boarded the eastbound train for Durham and left his baggage in the care of a passenger while he went across to the ticket office. Returning to the train, he could find neither his baggage nor the man in whose care it was left. The matter was placed in the hands of the police officers, who have so far been unable to locate either the man or the grip.

The articles contained in the valise were of considerable value to Mr. Arrington.

POWER OF THE HOLY GHOST.

The Subject of a Discourse of Much Power by Dr. Wood at West Market Yesterday.

Rev. Dr. F. H. Wood, presiding elder of the Greensboro District, preached a most excellent sermon at West Market Street church yesterday morning, his text being Luke 24: 49. "But tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high."

The line of thought was: The Holy Spirit is a being of such power that he convicts men of sin, whether they are willing to be convicted or not. God cannot convert a man unless the man be willing, but convict on is sure to come to all men. Every single individual of us knows we have sinned. The Holy Spirit has brought this conviction. We can have not even a good impulse without the spirit's instigation. The church seems to have lost sight of the fact that the Holy Spirit is the great power in making effective preachers. Learning and culture are good for all, but the minister that depends on them as a substitute for the enduement of power by the spirit is a signal failure.

There have been three dispensations of truth to the world. The first was the prophetic, directly under the supervision of the Father; the second was the Christian under the immediate direction of Christ; the third was and is that of the Holy Ghost. This comforter sent by the Christ in his stead has charge of the affairs of this world, and ever controls them. Never was anything like it, nor will there ever be. This Holy Spirit will guide the nations in the adjustment of the Chinese question, for the world is his. Likewise all invention, discovery and thought of today are being used by him for the advancement of the Saviour's kingdom.

The sermon was one of power throughout, and was received with marked interest and attention by the congregation.

ONE FARE FOR ROUND TRIP.

The Railroads Grant an Exceedingly Low Rate to the Fair—It Will Draw the People.

The railroads will grant a rate of one fare for the round trip to the Central Carolina Fair. This is as much as could be asked or expected and will insure an immense crowd. The rate will extend all over North Carolina and to points in the adjoining states, including Danville, Lynchburg, Richmond and Norfolk, in Virginia.

Recognizing the fact that low rates have much to do with an institution of this kind, the managers of the Central Carolina Fair went to work early to secure the greatest possible concession from the railroads. They are well pleased with the result of their efforts, as the rate is as low as any ever granted to any similar occasion in the South.

The rate from the Greensboro passenger station to the Fair grounds has not yet been announced, though it will be low, probably 10 cents for the round trip

The Horses are Coming.

"If this thing keeps on," said a gentleman this morning in speaking of the Fair, "we will have more fast horses on our race track October 9-12 than were ever congregated at any one place in the State. These horses are coming from all parts, and you may expect to see a class of racing that will stand on its merits."

No Lack of Hotel Accommodations

Inquiry has been made as to whether Greensboro will be able entertain the vast crowds that will assemble here during Fair week. Investigation reveals the fact that we are now prepared to care for more peoole in a comfortable and economical way than any town in the State. And Greensboro hotels are hard to beat.

Space Still Open.

To the Editor of The Telegram:

There is still open space for useful enterprises in our good city. A soap factory, a trunk factory, a tanyard, winter fruit and vegetable distributing and storage departments are some of the things that might be profitably engaged in. PROGRESS.

TO INSPECT THE GANG WELLS.

AUTHORITIES VISIT REIDSVILLE.

Convinced That Greensboro's Water Supply is Inadequate, Attention is Being Directed to Other Sources—Believed That the Well System Will Solve the Problem—Proving Entirely Satisfactory in Reidsville.

A realization of the inadequacy of the water supply of this city having been forced upon the attention of the Mayor and the members of the Board of Aldermen, investigations are now being made with a view to providing for a sufficiency of good and pure water. Since events have so shaped themselves as to make it wellnigh impossible to purchose the present plant at the excessive price agreed upon, the authorities are forced to look elsewhere for a water supply.

Considerable talk has been heard of wells—artesian wells, tube wells and gang wells—and some who hooted at the idea now admit that something of the kind might be practicable. Reidsville has a system of gang wells which is proving entirely satisfactory and furnishing an abundance of water, and it is argued that such a system could be put into successful operation in Greensboro.

A visit was made to Reidsville this afternoon for the purpose of making investigations and inspecting these wells. The party was composed of Mayor Taylor, Mr. H. E. Knox, a hydraulic engineer, and Aldermen Love, Hunter, Merrimon, Scott, Sergeant and Ellington.

Mr. Knox bored the wells for Reidsville and also bored a portion of the wells by which Brooklyn, N. Y., is supplied with water. It is understood that he has expressed the opinion that Greensboro would have no trouble in securing a sufficient supply of water from a like system.

ROBBERY IN HIGH POINT.

Correspondence of The Telegram.

High Point, Sept. 24—Mr. Solomon Burton, whose illness was noted in The Telegram, died at his home near here Saturday of malarial fever. Deceased had only been confined to his bed a few days when hemorrhages set in, causing death. Funeral services were conducted at the house yesterday morning and his remains interred in the cemetery here. Deceased was 34 years of age. One of his brothers, Dr. J. W. Burton, is a practicing physician of this place. Our people sympathize with the bereaved.

Mrs. H. F. Hoffman visited relatives in Thomasville yesterday.

The White Supremacy Club, organized here during the recent State campaign, should be replaced by a Bryan and Stevenson club for united work in the coming national campaign. Let us get together and organize in behalf of Democracy.

Last night or early this morning some one entered the store of Alf Fraley, the grocery and fruit man doing business in one of the stores under the High Point House, and carried off ten or fifteen dollars worth of goods. The officers are looking into the matter but as yet the thief has not been apprehended.

The Ham Lindsay building, which was somewhat demolished in the recent fire, is being torn down. I learn that a new structure will take its place.

Mr. Luther Jones' mother has returned from an extended visit to Richmond, Va. She was accompanied home by her little grandson.

The water works question is gaining ground day by day and it is now more than probable that the issue will be carried by a good majority. But let us not be over confident. We must keep up the good work of talking in its behalf until the day of election.

C. A. Barbee, newly elected captain of the High Point Riflemen, calls a meeting for tonight, at which time the first lesson in military tactics will be given.

Marshals for the Fair.

Mr. Will McAdoo, the chief marshal of the Fair, is arranging a list of his assistants which will be announced as soon as they are all selected, probably within the next day or two.

Miss Pearl Balsley will be the chief lady marshal.

Agricultural and Mechanical College Has 272 Students—Middle-of-the-Road Populists to Put Out Electoral Ticket—Convention of Democratic Clubs Will be a Big Affair—Mr. Simmons Figures His Majority—State Convention of Daughters of the Confederacy.

Special Correspondence of The Telegram.

Raleigh, Sept. 24.—There are today 272 students present at the Agricultural and Mechanical College. It will be a fortnight before all are uniformed. Many things are under way. Of course these are the studies. Then there are the drills. The batalion is composed of four companies. The band is practicing. So is the football team. The latter will play on the new athletic field, which does not as yet present a particularly attractive apprarance. The convicts graded it and then grass was sown, but the latter has set itself very irregularly.

The middle-of-the-road Populists (Dr. Cy. Thompson is of that ilk) are to meet here in State convention October 11th to nominate an electoral ticket.

Metropolitan Hall, which the lessee of the Academy of Music had leased for two years past, is not leased this year and the city will conduct it and has made some bookings.

"Sherlock Holmes" will be the next attraction at the Academy of Music, next week. It will be presented nowhere else in North Carolina. It will be one of the best attractions of the entire season. It required a heavy guarantee to secure this performance.

The Commissioner of Agriculture says there will be no State crop report for September, but that there will be one for October. As his reason he says that practically the same conditions prevail in September as in August.

Secretary P. M. Pearsall says that the State Convention of Democratic Clubs here next week will be a large one. Letters are rapidly coming in from various clubs, saying that delegates will be here. Aycock, Overman and Dan Hugh McLean will be among the speakers.

Mr. and Mrs. Josephus Daniels have gone to Bath, Me., where they will be present at the launching of the torpedo boat Worth Bagley. Mrs. Bagley, the mother, and her two sons, Henry and David, will be present. Two of Mrs. Bagley's daughters, Misses Belle and Ethel, are now in Europe, with their aunt, Mrs. Moffitt.

It is said that the attendance at St. Mary's College here, breaks the record. In reply to an inquiry the rector said he did not know how many there were.

The State has granted two important charters; one to the Asheville Auditorium Company, capital $25,760; the other of the Southern Consumers Brewing and Ice Company, of Charlotte, capital $300,000.

There is a movement here for a primary at the November election to get the sense of the tax payes of Raleigh as to the purchase of the water works. The idea is to give or not to give the aldermen the power to issue bonds for the purchase of the works. The city most assuredly ought to own them.

Last year a white woman here who claimed that she had tripped on a gas pipe above a sidewalk and sustained injuries by a fall, sued the city for $4,000. Yesterday she compromised for $250.

The tax list just made up for Wake shows an increase of $3,000 in valuation and of 77 in polls, as compared with last year.

Yesterday some one said Mecklenburg county would go for Simmons at the primary for Senator, today some one declared it would give Carr two thousand majority.

Small industries pay well, as is illustrated by a jug seller from Chatham county, who was delivering his wares here. He says two men are kept at work all the while and at certain seasons a dozen, and that there is a ready sale for the jugs. The wholesale price is 10 cents per gallon.

There are no uniform Odd Fellows in this State and very few uniformed Masons. Grand Secretary Woodell says it is because of the expense. North and west there are scores of thousands of both orders in uniform.

The Republicans have not as yet held their congressional convention in the 1st, 3rd, and 6th districts. That for the 1st is called.

There are now four candidates for the Senatorship in the field. Ex-Senator Jarvis is the fourth. He declared his candidacy Saturday. Will H. G. Connor be a candidate? was a question heard Saturday.

The United States has bought a little island in a few yards of the town of Beaufort and on it will establish a biological labratory. It is said as much as $10,000 will be expended there.

It is quite remarkable that there is no clue to the whereabouts of the latest murderer, "Boots" Brown. It is known that many negroes will aid him, or any other criminal of their race, for that matter, to avoid the officers, but it is also said that he has white friends who will aid him. While some profess to believe that he is yet in hiding in Raleigh's suburbs, others think he has left the State. He will hardly go to Norfolk or Portsmouth, though those towns are the places of refuge of hundreds of North Carolina criminals.

F. M. Simmons figures on at least 50,000 majority for himself. The friends of the various aspirants are doing plenty of claiming. Carr's friends say he has Mecklenburg by 2,000 majority, Guilford by 1,000, etc, while Simmons' friends say he will carry both those counties. In fact they can say Simmons will carry a county or two in Carr's district, the 5th. Some of the friends of Jarvis say he will prove a strong opponent.

Secretary Bruner of the Agricultural Department had good fortune in securing five specimens of apples from Yancey county for display at Paris. There was a summer show of last year's apples, and there will be next month a show of this year's fruit. A number of the specimens will be on view here at the State museums.

There are now only 800 State convicts, whereas 3 or 4 years ago there were 1,300. Of the 800 about 500 are picking cotton on the Roanoke farms.

is where we stand in the lumber business. At the kicking post, as it were, in regard to prices.

First comes the owner of the timber. He just woke up to the value of it and wants double last year's prices. Then the sawmill man. He has not been making a fortune and thinks now he should share a little in the general prosperity

GOD SEETH NOT AS MAN SEETH

"Life has gone well with me to-day," one said,
And raised his head,
Looked with exultant eyes,
Fearless of change, defiant of surprise,
Into the future—lo!
An awful vision rose,
Clear-cut against a background dark with woes,
He reeled as 'neath a blow:
"Ah, God! Can it be true
That is the meed and due,
Just recompense and terrible redress
For my superb success?"
"Aye, for it fed on what another lost,
Raised itself on the downfall of that other,
And stole its brilliance from a blackened brother;
Success—at what a cost!"

"Life has gone ill with me to-day," one said,
With drooping head,
Raising his tired eyes,
Filled with the weary pathos of surprise
At lofty purpose balked,
At noble work o'erthrown;
Defeat seemed aye to claim him as her own;
Dolorous failure stalked
Before his burning gaze—
When lo! with rapt amaze,
He saw a vision of the future rise.
Cried he in glad surprise:
"Dear God, can it be true my baffled dreaming
Hath of a surety wrought so much for Thee?"
"Aye; work, or good intent, or thought for me Fails not, whate'er the seeming."

RESPECTABLE SIN.

It Is Not the Outward Manifestation But the Root of the Matter We Should Look To.

It is with sins as with men of families, some have pedigree and some have not; for there are kinds and modes of sin that have, in all ages, been held in respect and embalmed with all the honors of history; and there are others that never were, and never can be, raised above the level even of disgust. The noble sins will, of course, be judged in a very different manner from the humble, base-born sins.

The sins of fame, honor, place, power, bravery, genius, always in good repute, will not seldom be admired and applauded. But the low-blooded sins of felony, and vice, and base depravity, are associated with brutality, and are universally held in contempt. Whether the real demerit of the two classes of sin is measured by such distinctions is more questionable.

Such distinctions certainly had little weight with Christ. He was even more severe upon the sins of learning, wealth, station, and religious sanctimony, than upon the more plebeian or more despised class of sins. Indeed, He seems to look directly through all the fair conventionalities, and to bring His judgment down upon some point more interior and deeper.

He appears, in general, to be thoroughly disgusted with all the mere respectabilities, whether men or sins. The hypocrisies of religion, the impostures of learning, the gilded shows of wealth gotten by extortion, the proud airs of authority and power employed in acts of oppression, provoke His indignation, and He deals with them in such terms of emphasis as indicate the profoundest possible abhorrence.—Horace Bushnell.

TO CONQUER WORRY.

Consider what must be involved in the truth that God is infinite and that you are a part of His plan.

Memorize some of the Scripture promises and recall them when the temptation to worry returns.

Attack it definitely, as something to be overcome.

Realize that it has never done, and never can do, the least good. It wastes vitality and impairs the mental faculties.

Help and comfort your neighbor.

Forgive your enemies and conquer your aversions.

The world is what we make it. Forward, then! Forward in the power of faith, forward in the power of truth, forward in the power of friendship, forward in the power of freedom, forward in the power of hope, forward in the power of God!—Henry Vincent.

LOYAL TO THE LORD'S DAY.

A Thought Appropriate to the Vacation Season—Two Good Examples to Follow.

Recently a large party of railroad conductors made a trip to a southern city. They arrived on Saturday evening. In the morning one of the conductors, noticing that a member of the party, a friend of his, was dressing with more than usual care, asked him:

"Are you going with us on the excursion?"

"No," was the reply. "It is Sunday, and I happen to like to go to church on Sundays." To another questioner he made practically the same reply.

This brought on a discussion in which, eventually, a majority of the members of the party engaged; and finally, when the conductor who preferred to go to church started on his way, he found himself one of a company of some 200 men, who had all been influenced by his quiet example.

We lately read of a young lady who quite as nobly "stood by her colors" at a summer resort. A college graduate, she possessed not only fine musical and scholarly accomplishments, but bright talents, wealth and personal beauty. Naturally her social influence was unquestioned. When Sunday came, a large party of boarders planned a horseback excursion, not doubting that she would join them.

"Why, no," she replied, when appealed to, "I am going to church."

In vain the thoughtless company pleaded vacation liberty, disparaged the "stuffy little country church," and protested that the "sleepy old minister" was "no preacher." She reproved them in her sweet way, suggested that the "city boarders" might help to wake up the poor old minister and his people, and then went to church as she had intended.

Before the season closed, the little church had a Sunday crowd of strangers, and not only the Christian young lady but several of her friends sang in the choir and had classes in the Sunday school. These incidents invite two reflections. There is no better mark of sterling character than the moral independence that foregoes a popular pleasure for duty's sake—the conscientious frankness that fearlessly refuses to "go with the crowd." Stand alone on a high principle, and the crowd will be more likely to come your way.

The obvious penalties of disregarding the Lord's day as a day of rest ought to lessen the tendency to sneer against the "Puritan Sabbath." Human rights, as well as Divine laws, are sacred, and both the beneficence and the sanctity of Sunday are testified to by the physical and mental nature of man.

Is not much of the business plea of "necessity," which exacts human toil seven days in the week, a narrow and mistaken commercialism? Is not the imitating of the "European Sunday," spending the day in exhausting sport or travel, an abuse of nature and a cause of moral enervation?—Youth's Companion.

THE COMMON LOT.

Temptation Comes to All Without Regard to Peculiar Circumstances or Surroundings.

We are very prone to think that the conditions of life in which we are placed make it exceptionally difficult for us to lead a Christian life of the highest kind. Other people are more favored, and therefore have less excuse for failure; our case, we are sure, is exceptional. We are hindered by weaknesses and tendencies from which others are happily free. Our start in life was less auspicious than theirs. Our early advantages were fewer. Our days are full of care and anxiety and struggles, while they live at ease. If things were other than they are with us, if we had less irritable tempers, were less harassed by cares, were engaged in some other business, were free from certain entangling associations or from one long succession of trouble, we could rise to greater heights of Christian attainment. Yet if we looked deeper we should find that difficulties in the way of being and doing right are not confined to any single class or condition. They enter into the common lot. There is no sphere in life in which men are not continually met by strong inducements to turn aside from the higher and diviner forms of life and to yield to the baser instincts and lower impulses of the nature. Change of lot would bring with it no exemption from sharp and severe testings. Beneath all surface differences lie common elements to which temptation makes its appeal. The pathway of victory is as accessible to the dweller in a tenement as to the dweller in a palace.—Baptist Union.

Millet in Russia.

Millet has in some parts of Russia taken the place of wheat as an article of staple food. Millet can be grown on soil unfavorable to other grains, but it cannot resist the effect of cold. From 1892 to 1896 the average annual production of millet seed in Russia was 6,000,000 bushels, but in 1896 it ran up to 9,500,000 bushels, and is remaining more or less at this figure.

HIGH PRAISE FOR JUDGE SHAW.

It is with great pleasare that we note the excellent record being made by Judge Thos. J. Shaw of our city in his courts from county to county. As an example of how his efforts to secure justice to law-breakers is being appreciated by the people, we copy from the Journal, of Monroe, where he has just held court, the following paragraph:

There is much favorable comment on the workings of the term of court held here last week. Of course Solicitor J. L. Webb gave satisfaction. He has always done so and our people know him. Judge Shaw who presided was prompt and resolute in the discharge of duty and before the end of the week his name became a terror to those who dreaded justice. One thing noticeable in Judge Shaw's court was that the bunco game of submitting, paying costs and dodging justice, didn't work. Fines were imposed and collected, the sum of $950 in fines being turned over to Treasurer McNeeley. Mr. McNeeley says that in the twelve years that he has been treasurer, or from Decenber 1st, 1888, to and including August, 1900, that the sum total of all the fines of all the courts during that time has only amounted to $1,016.33. It would be better for our county, better for the preservation of law and better for securing the ends of justice if we had more men of Judge Shaw's stamp wearing the judicial cloth.

We submit, as a subject for serious thought, that the administration of justice in North Carolina has become too slack. It is not so much a leaning to the side of mercy as it is a result of the skillful manipulations of our friends, the lawyers. Now, the country recognizes that it is his business to get his clients off if possible. The burden is, therefore, upon the court to see that he does not get off with less than justice. Of course this is not meant that a judge should do more than exercise vigilance in seeing that the decrees of the jury are carried out justly in cases in which the jury has spoken. In the great majority of cases in which serious misdemeanors escape justice, it is the laxity of the court that allows it.

We score one for Judge Shaw, and bid him keep up in well doing.

It should he borne in mind that the striking men in the Pennsylvania coal mines claim, and we have not heard the claim disputed, that certain railroads own 72 per cent. of the mines in which trouble exists, and are carriers for all the coal mined. It is further claimed that the roads charge exhorbant freight rates so that the mine opeations themselves will show little profit. Thus when the miners demand more consideration, the operators say they are paying all they can afford. If this is true the State of Pennsylvania ought to be able to pass a law preventing such a scandalous deal. The statement is also made that the miners recognize the railroads as their real opponents in the fight and are making efforts accordingly.

As a matter of interest in the present absorbing topic of who shall be Senator, we note that Webster's Weekly, whose candidate is Gen. Carr, has opened its batteries on Mr. Simmons, unburying some ammunition that most people had forgotten, and firing right and left. Webster will keep tab if the heavens fall, and he has a whole row of closets full of other men's ghosts.

Our Raleigh correspondent says that the question as to whether Judge Connor will be a candidate for Senator is being often asked. The News & Observer of yesterday says that it is authorized to state positively that he would be a candidate under no circumstances. Judge Connor's friends in Greensboro have known for some time that he would not be a candidate, but some of them have been hoping that he would change his decision. However, this public announcement puts all doubt at rest, and those who had been hoping to have an opportunity of voting for Judge Connor may as well prepare their ballots for some other candidate.

A statement is attributed to Lieut. Hobson, who has for some time been at work on the sunken Spanish fleet in Manila Bay, that Dewey did not sink these ships, but that the Spaniards scuttled them. Some papers are already saying this takes a feather out of Dewey's cap. Not a bit of it. It's just as good to make the enemy scuttle as to scuttle 'em yourself.

GLEANINGS.

Before leaving Vancouver, Lieutenant Hobson talked freely, and expressed the opinion that the serious part of the Philippine war was over; that guerilla warfare might be kept up for some time, but that the insurgents were well in hand. He believed the United States had done right in its wars, and had acted wisely in restraining the natives with a firm hand.

The annual income of the Shah, of Persia is nearly $42,000,000, making him the richest monarch in the world. The Czar gets about $30,000,000 every year; our poverty-stricken friend, the Sultan, exists on $8,500,000, Emperor William draws a salary of $8,000,000; King Victor Emmanuel, $2,000,000; Queen Victoria, $1,925,000, and Their Majesties of Greece and Portugal $260,000.

At a gathering of old folk in the town of Charlemont, Mass., the other day the chairman called upon all present who were over seventy years of age to arise, and seventy-two responded. He then asked all those who were over eighty to stand up, and there were twelve who had passed that limit. A similar call for all over the age of ninety brought four members of the gathering to their feet.

Insurance for bathers is the newest enterprise in the insurance line in England. The company which devised the scheme is placing penny-in-the-slot machines along the beach at all popular watering places. Upon dropping in a copper the bather receives a life insurance policy good for twenty-four hours.

A firm of cocoa manufacturers in Birmingham, England, has just declined to bid for a contract for thirty tons of cocoa for the British troops in South Africa. This action was taken from religious motives, the members of the firm being Friends, who do not countenance war.

President Gilman, of Johns Hopkins University, is said to write more letters than any other college president in the United States. The missives deal with every conceivable topic related to his manifold interests, and often number a hundred a day.

A company has been formed in New Haven for the purpose of serving hot meals to families within a radius of 70 miles of its headquarters. These meals are to be sent to nearby points in wagons having compartments for each article, and shipped to distant towns by rail in specially designed cases. They are to be placed in the wagons and cases smoking hot, and kept at a high temperature until placed on the purchasers' tables.

DESERTED HENS.

Flatbush, whose beautiful homes constitute a becoming frill to the outskirts of Brooklyn, has a woman's club that does not belong to the federation, has no rules, no by-laws, no parliamentary formalities, no initiation fee, no dues—nothing, in fact, that characterizes other clubs to which women having leisure and lovely homes belong, says Harper's Bazar. The Deserted Hens is the somewhat ignominious title used to designate the organization. The club in its inception was simply an expedient to meet the exigencies of loneliness, when on Saturday nights the male heads of half a dozen families deserted the hearthstones to have an evening together with cards at the club, returning at the wee, small hours.

"We women sat at home alone Saturday evenings half the winter," one of the Deserted Hens explained, "when a happy thought came to one of us. We would meet, have cards and supper ourselves. The first meeting was held at my home. The ladies ordered a carriage to come for them at one o'clock. The men were not to be informed of our plans, but I mentioned to my husband incidentally that I expected a few ladies for cards that special evening. Quite to my surprise he came home just as we were having supper. He grasped the situation at once, and thought he had a rare joke on the men he had left behind him at the club. Every Saturday evening since then those men have come trailing in at 11 o'clock."

So the Deserted Hens, as they saw fit to call themselves before they took matters into their own hands, are no longer so deserted as they were. But the odious name still clings.

AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Large Congregations Attended the Services Yesterday and Heard Excellen Sermons.

The revival services at West Washington Street Baptist church yesterday morning and evening were attended by very large congregations. The building was filled to its utmost capacity, many being tnrned away for lack of room. Last night the aisles were filled with chairs, the vestibule was filled and many stood just outside the door.

Rev. Mr. Martin preached two splendid sermons, which were well received by his hearers. He is growing in favor with the people.

The services will be continued through this week, there being preaching each day at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

THE HEBREW NEW YEAR.

Rosh-Hashonah, the Beginning of the Year 5661, Being Observed.

Today is Rosh-Hashonah, the beginning of a new year with the Hebrews, and all over the world the people of this faith are commemorating the day in prayer and praise. This New Year marks, according to the Hebrew calendar, the beginning of the year 5661. The Day of Atonement occurs ten days after Rosh-Hashonah, and this is also observed.

Several of the Hebrew merchants of Greensboro have their places of business closed In commemoration of the day.

GLORIOUS NEWS

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help: but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved,—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. Itstimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. Sold by C. E. Holton, druggist. Guaranteed.

MISSING TOOTH AN ALIBI.

Evidence of a Dentist Secures Freedom for Supposed Post Office Robber.

Testimony was lately taken before United States Commissioner Shields in the case of Henry Russell, who is alleged to have robbed the post office in Springfield, Ill., on April 3, 1895, and who escaped from Ludlow Street jail on July 4, 1895. Dr. Clarence Tallman, a dentist, of 165 West Seventy-first street was called to rebut the testimony of Postmaster Ridgeley, of Springfield, that Russell had called at the Springfield post office on March 25, 1895. Dr. Tallman, says the New York Sun, declared that Russell had been in his office here on March 17, 18 and 19, 1895, to have teeth attended to. The dentist had finally extracted it.

"That tooth was the second molar on the lower right jaw," said Dr. Tallman. "Examine the prisoner and see if that tooth is not missing."

Russell opened his mouth and the prosecution and defense looked in. The tooth was gone—alibi. All the other teeth were sound.

SAYINGS OF TARHEEL EDITORS.

Asheville Citizen: The last report from Manila shows 12 American soldiers, including two officers, killed. It will be observed that the war is still over.

Durham Herald: The candidate who looks upon the Senatorship as a natural birthright is going to be woefully disappointed.

Salisbury Sun: Referring again to the Senatorial primary question, it is to be hoped that the matter will be conducted decently and honorably. With four, and probably five, candidates in the field, the contest is likely to wax warm, but it should be done dispassionately and in kindness. No bitterness or evil designed stories should enter the race. It ought to be distinctively a fight for the office between friends.

Wilmington Messenger: If it be true that there is a continued exodus from North Carolina of the "brother in black" it only adds to the the proof that he lacks judgment and foresight. He would be wise to listen to men like Booker Washington and Bishop Turner, two of the wisest of their race.

Asheville Citizen: Apparently the national campaign will play second fiddle to the Senatorship contest in North Carolina.

A LIFE AND DEATH FIGHT

Mr. W. A. Hines, of Manchester, Iowa, writing of his almost miraculous escape from death says: "Exposure after measles induced serious lung trouble, which ended in consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed night and day All my doctors said I must soon die. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which completely cured me. I would not be without it even it cost $5 a bottle. Hundreds have used it on my recommendation and all say it never fails to cure throat, chest and lung troubles." Regular size 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. E. Holton's drug store.

CENTRAL CAROLINA FAIR.

"We have tried to remove the 'hog' from our midst, but the old timers have bucked against us and it looks now like they had us done for.

"Now we arise to a point of order. If the hog is a necessity, let us have a big show in swine at the Central Carolina Fair."

Gentlemen, bring out your fat specimens and get the prize. The date is October 9-12, inclusive.

One of our sister towns, not a hundred miles away, makes boast of so many hundred fine milch cows, so many hundred fine thorough bred pigs, and poultry in such quantities that they didn't stop to count them. Neighbors, bring the best pair of these to our Fair. We have a prize for the best. October 9-12 is the date.

ATMOSPHERE.

Kindly Thoughts and Honest Purposes Manifest Themselves in Intangible Ways.

We are all conscious that other people carry with them and radiate a certain atmosphere. We always find it difficult, perhaps impossible, to say in what it consists. Probably it is the subtle, ethereal effluence of personality and character; the aroma of desires and achievements and purposes. Often it is unnecessary for a person to say a word to you to bring others under the spell of this influence. While it is often associated with beauty or an impressive physical presence, that is by no means invariably so. A glance of the eye or an expression of the countenance reveals a spirit that repels us or to which we are drawn. More largely than we often think the influence that radiates from us is under the control of our wills. Kindly thoughts and honest purposes manifest themselves in these intangible ways. You do not need to tell me whether you are well disposed—I feel it. A very large part of our power to confer happiness on others depends on the quality of our personal radiation. It may inspire or depress; make the difficult thing look feasible, or weaken the resolution to resist temptation. Often we do not know when we are doing good or harm; but these unconscious influences are the net product of what we are.—Boston Watchman.

I NEITHER FAINT NOR FEAR.

I neither faint nor fear—
Whatever is, is best;
The page of conscience clear
My feet have onward pressed.
I neither faint nor fear
When in the tempest's track,
A storm cloud's brief career
Can never turn me back.

I neither faint nor fear,
Nor would my steps retrace;
The way indeed were drear
Could I desert my place.
I neither faint nor fear
But trust Omnipotence;
The Master I revere,
My shield and sure defense.

I neither faint nor fear,
With Him am I content;
To Christ would I adhere,
For Him would I be spent.
I neither faint nor fear
For He sustains my soul;
He bids me persevere;
He leads me to the goal.

I neither faint nor fear
Although these hands are weak;
Although the night is drear,
A gracious dawn I seek.
I neither faint nor fear—
Whatever is, is best;
May I one heart but cheer
To God I leave the rest.
—Cora C. Bass, in N. Y. Observer.

BESETTING SINS.

We all have them. We may not be conscious of them, we may even count them virtues, but they stand around us, resisting us in the way of grace, causing us to stumble and fall as we run the race, betraying us in moments of weakness, seizing us with a fury of passion. They are the products of our own lives. We have yielded to temptation, they yielded again more easily, and by continued repetition have formed the habit of sin in certain forms.

In itself a besetting sin is no more sinful than a single yielding to a temptation, but it has the accumulated guilt of oft repetition. Guilt does not lessen by repetition, but increases, for each transgression is added to all before it. A besetting sin is full of danger to us. Its nature is to grow, for with each repetition the power of resistance is diminished, the sense of sin is weakened, and the habit becomes more fixed. As running water wears for itself a deepening channel, so the currents of sin wear deeper into the character. Besetting sins have the advantage of us in this, they seem to have become a part of our nature, and dominate all that is about them and may be made subject to them. They thus beset us, and are also masters over us.

They are the product of our own lives, therefore, and we have a certain measure of power to overcome them. We are enjoined to lay them aside, and this implies freedom of action and power. In order to do this there must be watchfulness; first, the knowledge of our besetting sins, and then constant outlook against temptations. With this there must be cultivation of the opposing graces. Grace may be cultivated; grace may be made just as much a matter of habit as sin. In order to do this there must be a knowledge of the word of God, the cultivation of a sense of the presence of God and of His love. With this we must strengthen conscience, and give a better tone to the will, and withal, make continued and persevering effort. A fall is not necessarily a failure. We may make it so; we may also make it the occasion for the renewal of strength.—United Presbyterian.

MORAL HYGIENE.

The Secret of Mental and Spiritual Wholesomeness—The Treasuring of Garbage.

In our cities we have arrangements for the disposal of ashes and garbage at the public expense. Men come around to your house at regular intervals and cart it off to appropriate dumping grounds or receptacles, and most houses are connected with the sewers so that waste water is carried away; but there are no public arrangements for disposing of the waste products of the mind and disposition, like those which are so successful when applied to waste of the furnace or the kitchen. Physiologists tell us that if the waste of the natural functions is held in the body poisoning is the inevitable result. A master secret of good health is the proper elimination of waste. Is it not equally true in regard to the mind and the spirit? Do we not often store up the ashes of old desires and resentments, and the wastes of mental and spiritual assimilation and growth, as if they were treasures? St. Paul tells us that he forgot the things that were behind and reached forward to the things that were before. We are to carry over into each new day what was valuable in the past experience and resolutely "forget," leave behind and discard, the waste of the past. Is not that the secret of mental and spiritual wholesomeness?—Boston Watchman.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for indigestion or biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of appendicitis, nervous prostration or heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and othaches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to moke you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. For sale by Grissom & Fordham.

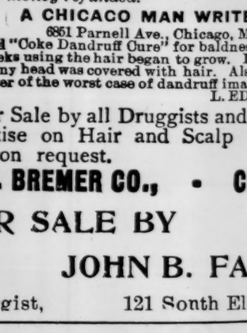
WINE OF CARDUI
How a Woman Suffers.


HOWELL, IND., Nov. 26.
I will always praise Wine of Cardui. It has done me more good than all the medicines I have ever taken in my life. Please send a book about female diseases to the ladies whose names I enclose.
Mrs. MINNIE STODGHILL.
McELREE'S Wine of Cardui
It isn't necessary for a woman to give particulars. When she says she has "female troubles", other women know what that means. It means days and nights of endless suffering. It means headaches which no tongue can describe. It means that terrible bearing and dragging down in the lower abdomen. It means agonizing backache, and shoulder ache, and arm ache, and aches in the lower limbs. It means nerves on edge—the blues— despondency and loss of hope. It means debilitating drains that the doctors call leucorrhœa. It means martyrdom—sometimes even death seems preferable. And still Wine of Cardui will utterly put those diseases and pains to rout. It has cured thousands of cases when nothing else on earth would. To the budding woman, to the bride, to the wife, to the expectant mother, to those going through the Change of Life, this Vegetable Wine is a blessing.

SOME THIEVES AND A LOVE AFFAIR. . . .

HER horse had shied at the sudden appearance of an automobile and with terror had bounded forward down the drive, throwing Eleanor from her seat and hurling her into an undignified heap on the pavement. The man in the automobile stopped his machine with a jerk, sprang from his seat and ran to her. He leaned over her for a moment, white with fear and excitement. Then, picking her up in his arms, he held her against his breast and looked searchingly into her face. In a moment she opened her eyes and laughed, in a little awkward gasp. He saw that she was not hurt, only a little stunned, perhaps from the shock of the fall, and he felt greatly relieved. But she was pale, and she held her hand over her heart as if the beating of it hurt her.

Others had gathered around in the meantime, so he carried her into the house which stood directly opposite the place of the accident. They were strangers to him and to her, but they opened their door hospitably and the servants made the startled girl comfortable, and the physician whom they called in gave her a sleeping draught to quiet her nerves and all seemed well.

When Miss Deering eventually opened her eyes and sat up in the strange room and looked about her in a cooler frame of mind, and found that her rescuer had disappeared before she could even thank him. She felt uneasy and unhappy. She had not done her duty in the unfortunate episode, and had created a street scene, and had not even expressed her gratitude to the man who had been so thoughtful and kind.

As she recalled his face now, a sudden, peculiar tumult filled her breast. Something in those eyes, some fleeting expression of the lips was strangely familiar to her. When her hostess finally accompanied her home she even confessed the mysterious man had not left his name, that he had remained only until he knew that Eleanor was not injured, and then had left as if greatly chagrined with himself because of the accident.

For months afterward his face haunted Eleanor. She watched the passing crowds, searching the countenance of each pedestrian for a chance glimpse of that dear head, grown sweet and idealistic to her because of persistent thought. Every avenue, every thoroughfare was sacred because she fancied that some time she would encounter him again. At last, just once, she passed him in the street. She looked at him searchingly. He was tall, his figure was fine and strong. There was a calm dignity about him that pleased her. She noticed a tinge of gray in the hair at his temples, but he carried himself with the buoyant swing of youth and vigor. When she had bowed to him he returned her look inquiringly, wondering where he had seen or met before. He groped in his mind for some vague recollection which annoyed him for a time and then dismissed the matter unsolved.

Miss Deering was an intellectual and progressive young woman. She had been called intelligent, even clever, and though she resented being classed with brainy women, nevertheless she continued to do those things which went far to dub and brand her as a bluestocking. Her latest fad, into which she was putting her whole soul and energy, was the writing of a novel, the purpose of which was to extol and beautify the lives of a little colony of Hungarians who had insinuated themselves into the Ghetto and had lived there apart from the world, seemingly untouched by the degradation and poverty which surrounded them.

Her visits to that colony were frequent. She dined with those members whom she knew; she entertained them with music; she talked politics and the mother country; she applauded their own patriotism; she sympathized with them; she insinuated herself into their hearts and became temporarily one of them. On one of her little jaunts into the district she was calling upon a family who lived in a sub-basement. During her sojourn there in the evening she overheard accidentally the name of a well-known man through a thin partition of an adjoining room.

"John Welton—John Welton," they kept repeating between snatches of hurried blasphemous talk. "Welton—money—three blocks—club—Michigan—drunk—friends—" these were the detached words which she caught, and they seemed to thunder in her ears like a knell of destined evil to an unknown human being. Suddenly the talk seemed to cease, and she could hear no more, but that name had seared itself into her brain. It was a familiar one to her. She had heard it often before, and she remembered that the John Welton whom she had heard about was a clubman, and that once she had been acquainted with his sister.

She inquired of her humble Ghetto hostess who her neighbors were, but the latter declined all information in a half-frightened way, and she said that they were strangers, whom it was best not to know. Eleanor watched the alley way that led to their rooms, and in time her vigilance was rewarded by the appearance of a bunch of young toughs, silent now and apprehensive, eying the neighborhood as they emerged with flashing, penetrating glances. Their manner seemed significant of evil.

When Eleanor went home that night she retired to her room early, and lay awake for hours with the name of John Welton ringing in her ears. The snatches of talk rose up again as a warning to her. It was a queer incident, and it seemed to her as if Welton were in danger, and that she had been chosen as the instrument to help him.

The next morning she awoke with the thought still vivid and rampant in her brain. She consulted the city directory, and found only one John Welton. "Shall I write to him, and tell him that I heard his name tossed from lip to lip from the mouths of thieves?" she pondered. "But, no, he will think that I am a crank or an accomplice trying to extort money. No, he won't even appreciate it. He will read it, and laugh, and imagine that I have an object in approaching him other than a purely disinterested one. I shall go and see him personally. Then I can explain all the circumstances, and he will understand and—perhaps he will be thankful for it."

It took Eleanor precisely two weeks to make up her mind to approach the unknown John Welton. In that time the duty of warning him took definite form in her mind, and it made her braver. She found the number and street of his place of business, and she walked resolutely into his office. A clerk asked her to be seated and Mr. Welton would see her in a short time. She waited a few terrible moments, wondering what John Welton was like, hoping that he would not think her an adventuress, and whether he would laugh at her fears, or be cordial and polite to her.

The door opened and Welton walked in. Eleanor looked up, and as she saw him standing there her heart leaped to her mouth. A gray mist rose before her eye, and she saw the vision of a man in an automobile and a disheveled girl lying on the pavement, and all the details of an accident that had occurred to her many months before. A little laugh of exultation echoed in her soul. The hand of Providence had led her to the man that she had watched for so long in public places.

"Are you Mr. John Welton?" she stammered, irresolutely. Generally self-possessed, she was seized by this unexpected encounter with something like fright for the first time in her life. She rushed through her story, getting it badly confused, and conscious of the fact that this man whom she was talking with was the one above all whom she would much rather have met in a more conventional way.

He searched her face pointedly. She was conscious of his scrutiny as she talked. He listened and made no comment. Then a light seemed to dawn in his brain, and he smiled suddenly, in a frankly pleased way.

"I remember now," he said, with bold inspiration, in the midst of her conversation, as if the information she had brought to him were of no consequence, and that he was thinking only of her. "You are the girl that I assisted on the drive one day when you had been thrown. Aren't you?"

"Yes," she exclaimed, frankly, "and I have been looking for you for months, only to thank you for having been so kind to me, and now fate has helped me, and I am able to tell you how much I appreciate what you did."

"And I think, Miss Deering, that you have amply repaid me for that tiny service. You are a most generous, whole-souled girl to wish to warn me of possible danger." He walked with her to the elevator, and he asked her if he might not know her better. When she acquiesced it seemed to him as if it were with reluctance. She had gone away coldly. Her formality was overdrawn, he thought.

A week later a box of flowers with a note from Welton reached Eleanor. The message was more than a friendly one. It ran: "This is to thank you for the kindness you have performed for me. It will be a great honor, my dear Miss Deering, if you will permit me to call upon you. Believe me, since the day I met you so inopportunely on the drive your sweet image has clung in my brain. I had often wished that I might see you again, and when you came to me of your own accord, when Providence took a hand in my wish, that was a glorious day, and your coming made it all the grander. May I hope to see you to-morrow evening?"

Eleanor read the note and kissed it, and sat down to answer it. At first she wrote a long reply telling him that she was happy that they had met. Then she destroyed it and simply wrote: "Yes, you may come." But she read his own note over and over again, coaxing from the depths of the sentences all the tenderness of his meaning.

"Eleanor, dear," he said to her some weeks afterward, "I don't know whether to thank your horse or my automobile for having brought us together."

"Neither, Jack. It was a gang of thieves," she answered, "and an unfinished novel, and my love of vicarious adventure, you know. Even thieves and novels seem to have been created for a purpose."—Chicago Tribune.
